Orpea is a French company that specializes in the development and management of nursing homes and retirement homes. It is the largest operator of nursing homes in Europe and the second largest in the world.

Orpea was founded in 1989 by Jean-Claude Marian and his wife, Martine, who started with a single nursing home in the town of Orgères, France. The company has since grown to include over 850 nursing homes and retirement homes across Europe, Asia, and Latin America. Orpea is listed on the Euronext Paris stock exchange and has a market capitalization of over €10 billion.

In 2017, Orpea acquired Clinique du Parc Monceau, a Paris-based private hospital, for €430 million. The acquisition made Orpea the largest operator of private hospitals in France.

Orpea has been expanding rapidly in recent years through both organic growth and acquisitions. In 2018, Orpea acquired Adhérents Santé, a French provider of home healthcare services, for €300 million. And in 2019, Orpea acquired Bupa Cromwell Hospital, a London-based private hospital, for £1 billion (€1.1 billion).
